JESSICA CAPSHAW

Blythe Hart on ABC's "9-1-1: Nashville"

Jessica Capshaw is best known for her role as Dr. Arizona Robbins in the longest-running primetime medical drama, ABC's "Grey's Anatomy," which she starred in for nine seasons and reappeared as a guest star in Season 20.

Capshaw can most recently be seen opposite Grace Van Patten in the hit Hulu series "Tell me Lies," which is based off the bestselling novel by Carola Lovering. She can also be seen in the Netflix romantic comedy "Holidate" alongside Emma Roberts, and the Gren Wells independent feature "Dear Zoe" alongside Sadie Sink, Theo Rossi and Justin Bartha.

Other television credits include "The L Word," "Bones," "The Practice," "Blind Trust," "Head Case," "One Angry Juror," as well as the TNT miniseries, "Into the West," alongside Keri Russell, Josh Brolin and Skeet Ulrich.

On the big screen, Capshaw starred opposite Ed Burns, John Leguizamo and Brittany Murphy in "The Groomsmen."

Capshaw earned her Bachelor of Arts degree in English literature at the prestigious Brown University. In addition to this, she also attended the Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts during her summer breaks, where she starred as Puck in a production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Capshaw is based in New York.
