

YAW AGYEKUM (aka Akili Bobo)

Freeform's "Royal Rules of Ohio"

Yaw Agyekum, affectionately known as Akili Bobo, is a multifaceted businessman and real estate investor known for his strategic acumen and philanthropic endeavors. Raised in Ghana, West Africa, Agyekum has established himself as a prominent figure in the medical sector, serving as the CEO of one of Columbus, Ohio's home health companies since 2005. His leadership has been pivotal in providing top-tier home health services, reflecting his commitment to excellence and community welfare.

Agyekum has successfully bridged his heritage and entrepreneurial spirit, creating a significant impact across continents. Alongside his wife, Delali Agyekum, he co-founded The Yaw & Delali Foundation, a charitable organization dedicated to empowering underprivileged communities through various initiatives, cementing their shared vision for social change.

Together with his wife, they are recipients of multiple awards, including Who's Who in Black Ohio for Entrepreneurship and the Adinkra Excellence Award for their work in the community.

A family man at heart, Agyekum is a devoted husband and a proud father to three daughters: Thelma, Nana and Brenda. His personal journey from the shores of Ghana to the bustling business landscape of America is a testament to his resilience and determination, inspiring many in his pursuit of the American dream while staying rooted in his cultural identity. Agyekum has an Associate of Science degree in both Respiratory Care and Nursing and also graduated from Prempeh College, one of the top High Schools in Ghana.

During his downtime, he enjoys reading, working out and spending time with his family. His three beautiful daughters have become his why in life.

-- Freeform --