

DELALI AGYEKUM (aka Mama Dollars)

Freeform's "Royal Rules of Ohio"

Delali Agyekum, affectionately known as Mama Dollars, is a Ghanaian-born American businesswoman whose professional and personal life is a tapestry of care, culture and entrepreneurship. Agyekum completed her education in Ghana and then graduated with an associate's degree from Hocking College. As a registered nurse by trade, Agyekum's nurturing spirit extends into her role as the managing director of a home health company in Columbus, Ohio. She also acts as an administrator at Akidel Investment Company alongside her husband, Yaw.

Alongside her husband, Agyekum shares a mission to give back to the community through the Yaw & Delali Foundation, which they co-founded. They are dedicated to uplifting others as a reflection of their synergistic partnership.

A mother to three daughters — Thelma, Nana and Brenda — the Agyekum home is filled with love, laughter and the rich aromas of her exquisite cooking, a hobby that brings joy to her family and friends. Her passion for exploring the world has taken her on numerous travels, each journey enriching her perspective and love for diverse cultures.

Agyekum's story is one of triumph, compassion and the relentless pursuit of dreams, inspiring others as she balances her professional ambitions with a profound commitment to her family and the global community.
