

BRENDA AGYEKUM

Freeform's "Royal Rules of Ohio"

Brenda Agyekum graduated from Kent State University with honors, majoring in criminology and justice studies and minoring in pre-law. While pursuing her undergraduate degree, she was heavily involved on campus, participating in track and field as a sprinter and becoming a student leader. She joined the Black Student Union, serving as president, and was on the event-planning committee for the African Student Association.

Sports shaped her life. Growing up, she was involved in drill team, soccer, basketball and track and field. Her first love of soccer helped her bond with her father, Akili. Gifted with speed, she won track-and-field conferences and district finals and placed at regional and state finals.

In 2021, Agyekum became a certified victim's advocate while working at a victim's assistance agency. She also has a mediation certification from Kent State University.

In her free time, Agyekum enjoys cooking, reading and journaling.

-- Freeform --